

Orland Takes 5th Straight Gridiron Victory

Last Sunday, November 8th, Orland Park won a closely contested grid duel from the Schurz Alumni of Chicago to the tune of 13-0.

Orland put over the first touchdown early in the second quarter when Wally Kline took the ball over in two consecutive smashes from the 10 yd. line thru the Schurz center.

A long run by Ludwig of Orland and some neat bucking by Walsh, Kline and Bodin contributed to the 60 yd. drive in which Kline finally took it over.

Walsh of Orland intercepted an enemy pass, to start the second half and snaked his way 30 yds. to a second touchdown for Orland. Bodin placed kicked the point, Walsh holding the ball.

Schurz took it on the lame in the rest of the quarter and staged a furious attack of about 65 yds. in length that was only finally stopped on the Orland 4 yd. line.

Schurz stopped another long stubborn drive in the fourth quarter that Orland finally halted but not until they were again backed up on their 4 yd. line.

Orland then took the ball and smashed and grove 45 yds. where Schurz held. Two plays later the game ended.

It was a really interesting and thrilling struggle and bitterly contested from whistle to whistle.

ORLAND BOY KILLED BY AUTO IN CHICAGO

Ralph Rahn, six year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Rahn of Orland Park, was killed by an automobile in Chicago Sunday. He had been staying with his aunt at 1775 Cullom ave. While out for a walk the lad broke away from his escort's hand and ran into the street at Ravenswood and Lawrence avenues. He was struck down by the car of Louis Dofferstein, 19, of 1456 Rosemont ave.

He was taken to the Ravenswood hospital by Dofferstein, who then surrendered to the Summerdale police. The aunt, Mrs. Bertha Rahn, was with Ralph when he died.

Wolf Road Is Receiving Attention

The editor is in receipt of the following letter from A. H. Lauer, insurance and real estate man at Des Plaines regarding the Wolf road article in last week's issue:

Dear Mr. Semmler:

I was much pleased to see the news item in your valuable paper. I have sent the item to the Milwaukee Journal and also expect to send one to the Cook County Herald and another to some other influential paper in Lake County.

I wish you would send me two or three copies of the same issue which I expect to use it in furthering our cause on Wolf road. Everything in Cook County looks very promising and the rest must come.

(The Will County road officials are still continuing to sidestep the matter of finishing the paving of Wolf road from the Hickory Creek Bridge south of Mokena to the Lincoln highway. Even tho the Will County officials are passing the buck and delaying the matter all they can the fact remains that the completion of the paving in question is up to them entirely and to no one else.)

Orland School Hears Armistice Day Program

An Armistice Day program was held at the Orland Park school on Wednesday morning at 11 o'clock. Sherman S. Knox of the Orland Legion Post delivered the following address:

I am not unmindful of and fully appreciate the great honor and the great privilege which has been accorded me in thus being permitted to stand before this assemblage of young Americanism, and especially on this annual observance of what we call Armistice Day. Unlike Memorial Day which is an occasion of solemn tribute to the dead, Armistice Day should be an occasion of the profoundest thanksgiving for victory, for the triumph of democracy over despotism and for the continued assurance that the fundamental principles of the rights of man and of nations as enunciated by the hallowed founders of this country shall still endure. It should be a day of re-affirmation of our pledge of allegiance to God and to country, witnessed by the immortal shades of those untold thousands who laid down their lives that the world should be safe for democracy and all that it means to you and to me.

Thirteen years ago today, the most cataclysmic struggle in the history of the world was brought to a close. It was a struggle involving most of the nations of the world and the casualties ran into millions. The future of the world hinged on the outcome. Just when the limit of human endurance of body and of mind seemed on the verge of snapping, when the soil of the earth was soaked with blood and the winds of heaven filled with tumult of battle, and the groans of the dying ascended into high heaven in protest at what seemed to be the ultimate destruction of the human race, came that blessed lull that presaged the dawn of peace to a war torn world. On Nov. 11, 1918, emissaries from the German entente met with representatives of the allied powers in the seclusion of the Forest of Compiègne near Chimay—Fournie—La cappel. Here, using railroad coaches as headquarters, the representatives of the warring nations deliberated for eight days before finally agreeing on the terms of the Armistice. In the cold and misty night of a French fall morning, precisely at 5 o'clock on Nov. 11, 1918, just as the quickening rays of the sun were beginning to show in the east, the deliberations were ended and the Armistice was signed. Under the terms it became effective in six hours or 11 o'clock a. m.

My friends, can you not imagine how God must have smiled when at 11 o'clock on the morning of Nov. 11, 1918 the last hateful salvo of death dealing guns suddenly were silenced when the clear notes of the bugle sounded "cease firing" and how the spirits of those brave men on both sides, who had made the supreme sacrifice for their countries must have looked down in benediction and said "Peace! Peace at last to a troubled world. May that Peace long endure. May such love come into the souls of men that they shall not seek occasions of conflict but shall live in concord and labor for the broader benefits of all mankind."

West of the Battlefields

The din of battle ceased and quietness crept
 Across the world; 'twas sunset time up there
 Beyond the smoke, and Heaven beamed jewel-bright.
 One dying raised his weary eyes in prayer.
 He watched the blue and dreamed of lovely eyes
 That wept for him who would see their charms no more.
 Then red and blue, deep-blended, filled the skies
 And flooded earth with victory's royal hue;
 One dying sighed and murmured, "Grant me rest!"
 Then deeper darkness fell and argent doors
 Were gently opened to him in the West.
 As one made whole, he rose and entered in,
 And looking back, he saw that night had been
 And was no more. An Autumn morning bent
 Triumphantly above an earth washed clean.
 He turned and knew that others watched with him,
 A company of men grown more than men.
 "Why do you smile?" he asked and he smiled, too.
 "Down there," they said, "men dwell in peace again!"
 —Violet Alleyen Storey in New York Times.

Now, again the hands of time draw nigh that fateful hour of 13 years ago when a war-torn world ceased its hostilities. In commemoration of which sacred event, it is your duty and my duty—at 11 a. m. Armistice Day—to face the east in solemn silence. And from the depths of our hearts, send up a prayer of undying gratitude to those heroes who gave their all for humanity's sake.
 A salute to them! And a promise that they have not died in vain. No disturbing force, either without or within shall ever threaten the nation's peace and security which their sacrifice gained—no power ever undermine our great government and the honor and independence for which it stands. Yes, as a tribute to our hero dead, let us re-dedicate our lives in defense of those ideals.

Tinley Lions Enjoy Address Given by Special Speaker

The Tinley Park Lions Club had a mighty fine meeting Monday night and there was a good attendance of members and invited guests.

Thurlof Essington was the speaker for the evening. He gave a very interesting talk, in a neighborly, chatty vein, which seemed to win the undivided attention and hearty approval of his listeners.

Mr. Essington is an optimist on the future of Bremen Township and Tinley Park and looks forward to great and healthy development in the southwest corner of Cook County. He brought well the point that good things done in a community do not just happen, but are the logical results of organized effort upon certain or all members of that community and thus pointed out the reason and benefits derived from the so called service clubs such as the Lions and Rotary Clubs, Garden Clubs and Parent-Teachers Association, etc.

Mr. Essington believes that the leadership of such organizations, combined with the co-operation of the whole community spells progress in big letters. Those present feel that those who were not present missed much as this was more than just another meeting.

Lion Henry Wyman, chairman of the dance committee reports completion of the final plans for the Lions Fourth Annual Ball November 18th at the new Tinley school auditorium. All Lions and their families in the surrounding territory are cordially invited. Come where your money does double duty, as the net proceeds will be divided with the fund, which is being collected for the equipment of the auditorium and gymnasium of the Tinley Park public school.

The public spirited citizens of Tinley Park propose to furnish the necessary equipment to the auditorium and gym without expense to the taxpayer.

Proceeds will go to the benefit of the new school auditorium.

Hundreds Attend Play In New Tinley Park Auditorium

The play "Nora, Wake Up" that was staged at the new Tinley Park school auditorium last Friday night, drew a crowd estimated at close to 500 people. The play was directed by Mrs. Trudie Swisher and made a big hit. Every one was thrilled with this production and Mrs. Swisher received many telephone calls the next day complimenting her on her fine work of directing and on the success of the play. All the members of the cast did excellent, filling their roles to perfection. The play was of an out of the ordinary nature and went over in a very big way.

The proceeds will be turned over to the Tinley Park P. T. A. to further the good work they have been carrying on for five years in connection with the Tinley Park school.

The drive for funds was then begun and the first donation was from the Achievement Club of the Orland Park public school, followed by donations of $25 each from Rev. Wm. Gorey, John G. Loebe and James E. Creer. Various other donations and pledges were received ranging from $15, $10 to pledges of $1 a month for five months and 50c a month for five months. A total of $208 was raised in a few minutes. Receipt books for donations and pledges have been placed in the local Orland Park stores. Relief Program Launched at Orland Park

The Orland Park Post of the American Legion put on a very good Armistice Day program in the Orland public school auditorium Wednesday evening and in spite of the rainy night there was a full house.

Commander Van Buren Knox of the Orland Post was the chairman of the Legion program. The national and the post colors were advanced by the color guard while the Orland Park Community Band played the national anthem.

Mr. McGinnis of the Englewood Legion Post gave an address on the work and purpose of the American Legion.

Rev. Paul T. Sanders of the Orland Park Legion Post gave a brief address on world peace and of the outlawry of war.

Emmett Hudson, a noted tenor, Miss Estelle Spoo, noted tap dancer and Miss Fritz Hugh, noted actress and singer, all of Chicago, offered special entertainment features.

In the course of the addresses it was pointed out that thirteen years after the signing of the Armistice, the world is filled with suspicion, hate and greed and news from the Orient would indicate that the world is facing another great war. It was shown that merely signing peace pacts does not mean anything and that enduring peace will only come about thru education of the nations that war is a great human folly.

The Orland Park Community Band furnished a fine program.

At the close of the Legion program the Orland Park Relief Service officially launched their drive. John G. Loebe, chairman of the local Relief Service introduced Attorney McElroy from the Cook County Relief Fund and he gave a graphic outline of the great need for relief and pointed that the unemployed have already organized in many instances to start riots and disorders if they are not taken care of. The militia, he stated, has also been organized to cope with any disorders that may arise. He made a plea to everyone present to do their utmost to help stem the tide.

Rev. Wm. Gorey of the St. Michael church in Orland, chairman of the Orland Park Relief Service, told of the local organization being formed, and while there is no immediate distress he advised that it would be best to be prepared to meet any emergency that may arise within the next five months.

The drive for funds was then begun and the first donation was from the Achievement Club of the Orland Park public school, followed by donations of $25 each from Rev. Wm. Gorey, John G. Loebe and James E. Creer. Various other donations and pledges were received ranging from $15, $10 to pledges of $1 a month for five months and 50c a month for five months. Britain's New Embassy

Located on a four-acre tract, the new British embassy at Washington is a gigantic, rambling structure of Queen Anne and Georgian design. The conception of Sir Edwin Lutyens, it has been carried out in fisher brick—a dull, parti-colored brick—and limestone. Variety and beauty of design characterize the building. There are 97 rooms, 28 with baths, as well as several showers, and a swimming pool in the back garden near the tennis courts. There are two nurseries, rooms for maids, footmen and chauffeurs, and there are libraries, sitting rooms, a drawing room, a long dining room and the ball room.

Good Health Is Your Natural State

But you can't expect to enjoy good health if you are allowing disease germs to accumulate and multiply somewhere in your system. Coughs, colds, bronchitis, tonsillitis, rheumatism and often neuritis are the work of disease organisms which must be attacked and destroyed if good health is to be restored. These and many other more serious types of infection may be controlled and good health restored by chemically destroying the germs, using B. & M., The Penetrating Germicide, to stop the bacterial poisoning. The B. & M. treatment is unlike any other—quick and positive in action. Your druggist should have B. & M. in stock. If he fails to supply you promptly, send us his name and $1.25 and we will mail you a full-size bottle. Helpful booklet free on request. F. E. Rollins Co., 53 Beverly St., Boston, Mass. (Adv.)

Pigeon Was Reasonable

A pigeon nearly upset business in a Lynn (Mass.) cigar store recently. The bird entered and perched near the ceiling of the high-studded store and all efforts to dislodge it were without avail. When it came time to close the store the clerk thought he would have to lock the pigeon up inside. Before doing so he exclaimed in a loud tone of voice, "Get out, we are going to close up." The pigeon then flew down to the floor, ate some peanuts there, after which it walked, not flew, out of the store.

Firemen Watch Blaze

Firemen called from all parts of Belfast, Ireland, recently, stood idle as they watched a fire burn itself out. An underground electric cable had fused, and flames shot several feet in the air from an open manhole, the cover of which had been blown off by the heat. The pavement was also forced up by the heat. Many business houses in the center of the city were plunged into darkness. Owing to the nature of the blaze the firemen could not fight it.

ACID STOMACH

EXCESS acid is the common cause of indigestion. It results in pain and sourness about two hours after eating. The quick corrective is an alkali which neutralizes acid. The best corrective is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. It has remained standard with physicians in the 50 years since its invention.

One spoonful of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia neutralizes instantly many times its volume in acid. Harmless, and tasteless, and yet its action is quick. You will never rely on crude methods, once you learn how quickly this method acts. Be sure to get the genuine.

The ideal dentifrice for clean teeth and healthy gums is Phillips' Dental Magnesia, a superior toothpaste that safeguards against acid-mouth.

Capt. Frank M. Hawks

By GEORGE BECK

THE young man with a strong urge to become an aviator and who has the time to learn the science of flying in a thorough manner, can do no better than to apply to Uncle Sam who operates the finest aviation schools in the country.

At fifteen army fields throughout the United States, Uncle Sam has enrolled at present over 5,000 reserve fliers whose training expenses far exceed, per man, the cost in any other branch of service. For the privileges extended the reserve flier, the value of the training he gets, the good times he has, all that Uncle Sam requires in return is an intelligent, industrious young man between the ages of twenty and twenty-seven who has had at least two years' college education and who has the makings of a flier in him.

In an exclusive interview the writer had for this article with Captain Frank M. Hawks, just returned from a spectacular tour of Europe in his speedy Lockheed-Vega, the Texaco 13, Hawks declared there was an urgent need for more and better trained pilots in this country.

The finer designing of planes, he said, and the necessary continued study of aeronautical science generally, particularly with respect to training of airmen, holds the future of aviation in this country.

Hawks firmly believes in the coming of high-speed planes for commercial use, for passenger transportation over the airways. In speed, he says, is the future of flying. In fact he believes in it for all future transportation, land, water and air.

"The day is coming," he said, "when we shall ride in planes that travel 200 miles an hour, trains that move at 100 m. p. h. and we will drive our automobiles over express highways at 60 and 70 miles an hour. Does that sound impossible? Then excuse it as the idle dream of a speed demon who likes to sit back in an easy chair and visualize through the smoke rings of his cigar, new speed pictures of tomorrow."

The glider, Captain Hawks recommends as one of the best means of training for the brotherhood of aeroplane pilots.

"Primarily," says Captain Hawks, "the glider has sound fundamental values. Unquestionably, it offers a very safe and inexpensive means to student aviators for instruction. The novice in flying gets a keener technique and a better knowledge of aerodynamics. In the first few tender hours of flying he can learn a great deal more with a glider than with a power-driven plane. He is not depending upon the motor but is learning currents of air, the action of the controls; he is depending more upon real flying as it is taught to us than by sheer horsepower. Every landing that he makes is a forced landing because he has no motor, so his judgment in approaching fields, and landing on marks is keener."

"The novice receives the thrill of his life on his first glider flight, though its duration may be only half a minute; he gains a decided feeling of power later when aloft for fifteen minutes, alone. I have observed many skeptics make their first glider flight and have seen them change in a snap of the fingers from doubting Thomases to boosters. I have seen many contemporaries who thought they had enjoyed all the thrills and sport of aviation through power-driven airplanes turn to gliders like children to a new toy. There's just as much skill required and just as much thrill and fun enjoyed in gliding as in speeding through the air at double express train paces."

The object of the flight of the Texaco Eaglet, in which Captain Hawks was towed from San Diego to New York last year by J. D. ("Duke") Jernigan, Jr., who flew the Waco Texaco 7, was to stimulate interest in gliding, which in brief, is a cheap and safe stepping stone to powered machines, provided, of course, that proper instruction is first given the student. Obviously, no student will move immediately from completion of a course in gliding to flying a ship such as the Hawks speed plane with its engine of more than 400 horsepower and a demonstrated speed of 270 miles an hour.

But here again, Captain Hawks has ideas: If a "kicker" motor of two cylinders is developed to drive gliders efficiently and safely, a new intermediate and valuable step in aviation will have been accomplished. Says Hawks further:

"I have made a few observations which have convinced me that the so-called primary glider with its skeleton fuselage, inefficient wings and controls, has no place in the picture of American gliding activities. I would rather see young men start their glider work with the secondary or utility type of glider."

"I am opposed to the automatic launching device which spring tension snaps the glider into the air with such violence that it is not only unnatural but extremely dangerous to even an experienced pilot. I believe that gliders and soarers must be taken seriously by either those experienced in flying or by students. It is a real art, not as simple to accomplish as it seems, and cannot be taken lightly. Gliding, in my opinion, is safe if properly supervised and instruction is thorough."

If gliders remain only gliders they will still impart the fundamentals of flying, and from them the student may step to a fledgling airplane and meet the "horses" that drive it. Here again, progress is obviously gradual, but sure. Out of such a mill it is easy to visualize the emergence of a new crop of aviators who might well provide considerable slipstream to veteran fliers of today.

At Mitchell field, Long Island, one of the army flying fields where reserve training is carried on there are planes reserved every week-end throughout the year for the use of reserve corps officers. This is the case at nearly all the army flying fields. It is the privilege of the officer and at the same time an Air Reserve corps requirement to fly an army plane a certain number of hours every month.

Once a year the reserve corp officers train for two week periods at the army fields throughout the country. At New York the observation squadrons composed of officers of the Second corps area camp at the Long Island field during the summer. At fields in the south and southwest reserve corps training is carried on throughout the year.

Lectures by regular army aviation officials cover such subjects as radio communication and equipment, navigation, cross country flying and aerial photography. Then with parachutes strapped to their backs, a strict army regulation, the fliers put these lecture subjects to actual practice in the air in addition to formation and observation flying.

There are two primary aviation schools in Texas and California and one advanced school at Kelly field, San Antonio, Texas. The graduate of the reserve school goes in the regular army for two years as a commissioned officer and licensed pilot.

Out of some several thousand applicants to the army flying schools every year, a few hundred are enrolled for the primary training. Less than half of these succeed in obtaining their diploma, commission and license as a reserve army flyer. This past June 98 cadets received their "wings" at Kelly field and were assigned to army fields throughout the country. A few days before 245 applicants were selected to begin training.

Courses in both the primary and advanced schools give the cadet 225 hours in the air with the necessary auxiliary studies in meteorology, airplane-engines, navigation, radio, aerial gunnery and other academic and field subjects for military pilots.

Besides strict physical examinations to determine whether or not the cadet is going to make a flier, he is put through tests which are described as psychological by the instructors. He needs, they maintain, a re-education to give him "air confidence" and "air sense."

One of the cadet's first experiences which is almost as frightening as his first solo flight, is a tryout in an "orientator," a mechanical device which whirls and revolves him through every revolution and movement a plane will make in the air.

It resembles the cockpit of a plane and in that the cadet sits. The mechanism is dual-controlled, that is, the cadet operates controls similar to those of an airplane and the instructor sitting outside of the device operates a control which puts the cockpit through its motions. The instructor, who gets a certain enjoyment out of the business, no doubt, tries to upset the equilibrium of the cadet while the cadet tries to maintain it.

Soon after he enrolls the cadet starts actual dual flying. After a few days of infantry drill and other ordinary military duties to put in the mind of the cadet that he is one of Uncle Sam's soldiers, within the first week he finds himself with his instructor ready for his initial flight. The cadet is getting his first lesson—to have full confidence in his instructor. In order to put this over the instructor goes through a few spins and rolls until, in some cases, a cadet is about ready to crawl in his teacher's pocket. Another purpose of this flight is to have the cadet "feel out the situation" of flying for he is told nothing before he starts except to hop in the plane.

The flying is done in the morning and the ground schooling in the afternoon of a day that lasts from 6:30 until 4:30.

His next venture aloft, the cadet is told, is for "air work." It consists of straight flying, spins, banks, forced landings and the course lasts ten flying hours. In the forced landing instruction, the instructor kills the engine while the plane is in some precarious position or locality and the cadet must glide to the ground safely. A careless accident on his part will promptly eliminate him from the cadet ranks.

His next trial is a solo hop around the field watched closely by his instructor on the ground. And when the cadet returns safely to the field, even though he has shown, possibly, great skill in handling his first flight, he is greeted with, "Well, did ja bring that plane back without smashing it up," by his instructor. The purpose of this is to keep the embryo pilot from getting a "swelled head."

For eight months the cadet continues his lessons in his own plane. Those lessons include night-flying, aerobatics, cross-country and formation flying, navigation, gunnery, bombing, radio and military tactics of all sorts.

His training in aerobatics begins after he has had about twenty hours in the air. Keeping always a level head and a keen eye, he must put his plane through spins, nose dives, loops, rolls, slow rolls, half rolls, and snap rolls. Flying over an "air course" he must always come out of a roll aiming his plane at a certain designation. There is no fluttering about in the air.

A unique feature of gunnery practice is the use of a camera gun with which the cadet trains a lens on the target and "shoots" a picture instead of a bullet. The instrument resembles a gun in every way and the operation of it is almost exactly similar. The films are developed at the end of the attack and if a photograph shows the target, a hit is scored.

Navigation and cross-country flying are two of the most important branches of the flying course. It covers the study of compass and instrument reading, the use of the sextant and course spotting. An interesting subject, too, is the study of artificial horizons. Horizons are created in the sky for the guidance of the navigator just as a ship's captain uses the actual horizon of the sea to determine his position.

In the advanced school to which the cadet goes for about four months after he completes the primary school course, he gets classification training in all types of planes. There it is determined just what kind of flyer he is. In the army there are four kinds, observation group, attack, bombardment and pursuit.

The overly-cautious and apprehensive flyers are quickly detected and eliminated. It is the pilot who can smilingly pull himself out of a barrel roll, drop to the ground on a neat three-point landing, hop out and nonchalantly light a cigar, who is given the coveted gold wings.

COMFORT

... THROUGH CASTORIA'S GENTLE REGULATION

The best way to prevent colic, doctors say, is to avoid gas in stomach and bowels by keeping the entire intestinal tract open, free from waste. But remember this: a tiny baby's tender little organs cannot stand harsh treatment. They must be gently urged. This is just the time Castoria can help most. Castoria, you know, is made specially for babies and children. It is a pure vegetable preparation, perfectly harmless. It contains no harsh drugs, no narcotics. For years it has helped mothers through trying times with colicky babies and children suffering with digestive upsets, colds and fever. Keep genuine Castoria on hand, with the name:

"My hubby, dear," said Mrs. Johnson. "He ducked."

A very interesting meeting was held at M. E. church Sunday afternoon, Nov. 1st. of the board members and all those interested in the church work. Several questions were up for discussion, one was, would it be possible to have one class each Sunday take charge of the church school program for that day, this was to be worked out by the worship committee, Mrs. E. Sipple being chairman; another question was should we have a bible discussion hour in place of the regular church sermon? A motion was made for the time of the church services to be changed from 11:30 a. m. to 9:30 a. m. Sunday School to follow this service. The motion was made by Mrs. A. C. Hall and seconded by Mr. McGovney.

H. W. Wyman's Speech Delivered

At the Dedication of the New Tinley
Park School Building, Nov. 4, 1931

Mr. President, Members of the School Board and Associate Building Committee, Neighbors and Guests:-

It is with a sense of pleasure and appreciation that I accept the honor of having been called upon to preside over this most important occasion, the dedication of one of Cook County's most beautiful school buildings.

I shall endeavor in my humble way to assist in carrying out this evening's program as outlined by Mr. Bert Fulton, the honorable president and Mrs. Jennie Klepper and Mr. George Rowden, members of the school board.

I will be as brief as possible in the few remarks I have to make as we have a number of good things on our program and speakers of interest whom I am sure you will be pleased to hear.

Before proceeding further it is my pleasure to announce that in behalf of the President and associate members of our board, I extend to our guests and friends who are with us tonight a most hearty welcome. We are pleased in having you with us on this occasion when our hearts are filled with appreciation of a realization of a hope long cherished that we could have a school equipped with an auditorium where our children could have their exercises under an environment that is character building rather than otherwise.

I should like in a few words to refer to the community spirit as it here exists and which has manifested itself in the hearts of our people and is plainly noticeable in the various accomplishments undertaken in our village during the past few years.

A spirit which I consider is directly responsible for this building as you see it here tonight. It took quality citizenship to launch and bring to a successful conclusion the erection of a school building such as we now have.

Having been born and reared in Tinley Park, a product of the old sod, as the Irishman says, I have watched with interest the slow but sure progress made by our village as the years rolled by. But not until a few years ago did our village take on an aspect of real progressiveness when unusual strides evidenced themselves in development and in increase of population. And this is now visible all about us.

Many new faces were noticeable, farms were being subdivided. I refer to the 40 acre Andre's farm southeast of us and south of town and the 134 acre Fulton farm north of us. Speaking of this latter farm recalls to my mind many pleasant instances of bygone days. An old landmark, possessed of a most hospitable home where in years gone by many of our young folk and many of our older folks who dot this audience here tonight congregated and wiled away many hours in merriment and play—a place where we always found the latch string on the outside of the door. Many of us today still harbor these pleasant memories of old.

All this is now gradually being wiped out as Tinley Park continues on her march of development and progress.

I also want to say a few words in reference to the civic spirit displayed by some of our organizations. Most of these folks are so fond of doing things for the betterment and upbuilding of our community that it has become a habit with them and when Tinley Park considered building a new school they were among the first to say "Let's Go."

It is therefore with a degree of pride that we point to the wonderful achievements of our Garden Clubs who have done so much in beautifying our community. Their outstanding achievement being the creation of a park on the south side of town. This was landscaped and beautified and its growth is well under way and this is gradually being enlarged. These ladies are doing a fine work and deserve much praise.

To the Lions Organization for the erection of street signs on the corners of our streets, renaming of streets, and numbering of houses, the erection of two public drinking fountains, the sponsoring of a tree planting campaign that resulted in the planting of over 2,000 trees and various other achievements.

To the American Legion for their outstanding patriotism shown in all things that stand for the good of our country, their presentation to this school of a flag pole and the stars and stripes that unfurl from its top, a most beautiful lesson in love of country for our children as they grow up. The upkeep of some 60 good sized American flags that dot our main street and some of our side streets on all national holidays.

To the Parent-Teachers Association who by their loyalty to our school have donated much of their time and hard work in giving entertainments and various other benefits and social affairs to raise money for the purchase of books for our school library, paraphernalia, equipment and other necessities that the children attending our school may get the best in education and comfort and are now busily engaged in providing ways and means to take care of some of the furnishings of this new building. They are also doing a great work and deserve much praise.

We also want to point with pride to our up-to-date Volunteer Fire Department and their modern and fully equipped fire engine. The civic spirit of these men deserves our commendation.

I sometimes wonder what our conditions would be without these folks. By their works ye shall know them.

And now the completion of southwest Cook County's most beautiful school building.

It is therefore fitting and proper that this large assemblage composed of citizens of this community and their friends should commemorate this occasion with a celebration such as this.

THE "HIDDEN QUART"

That Stays up in the Motor and Never Drains Away

PROVES ANY OIL WOULD BE BETTER OIL IF GERM PROCESSED

Other good oils lubricate working parts after the motor starts and oil is pumped from the crankcase through the motor, which takes several minutes. But Germ Processed Oil stays up in your motor at all times and lubricates working parts safely during the starting period. A "hidden quart" stays up in your motor and never drains away. Only Germ Processed Oil can give you this sure protection at all times, because only Germ Processed Oil can penetrate and combine with metal surfaces... an exclusive characteristic called "penetrative lubricity." So you can see... any oil would be better oil if Germ Processed!

But only Conoco makes Germ Processed Oil... for Conoco owns exclusive patent rights for North America. Don't be contented with oil that lacks the germ process. Stop at any station displaying the Conoco Red Triangle and fill with Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil. Save your motor from wear... keep it young and powerful!

It is also fitting and proper at this time to say a few words in behalf of the honorable president of our school board, Mr. Bert Fulton and the other members of the board, Mrs. Jennie Klepper and Mr. George W. Rowden and the associate members of Building Committee, H. C. Vogt, Fred Goebel, Paul Rauhoff, John F. Boeyer, John C. Funk and Edward Henke.

This lady and these men who sit here on this platform with me tonight are directly responsible for the completion of a school that would be a credit to a city of 100,000 or more.

Each member of this committee was drafted because of their honesty, capable business ability and untiring zeal and their much planning and deliberations fully prove what can be accomplished in the economic handling of taxpayers money.

We all realize the enormity of the task they undertook and there is no doubt that their planning and many deliberations required many hours away from their places of business at daytime and from their homes at night and these services were always given by them in a spirit of cheerfulness and the result is here clearly exemplified and speaks for itself.

We have here a structure substantially built, economically engineered and supervised, modern in all its appointments, beautiful in architecture and represents value received for every dollar invested.

An educational, social and welfare center equipped with this large and beautiful auditorium (something that this community always longed for) a building that stands out as a monument for the education of our children and a credit to our citizens.

The greater part of your deliberations are now concluded and I am certain that I voice the sentiments of the citizens of this school district your neighbors and friends when I say to you, "well done our good and faithful servants"—we feel grateful toward you for your patriotism, untiring zeal and good judgment used in this important task, started in July and completed in November, planning and bringing to a successful completion Southwest Cook County's most beautiful school building.

THE STORY

Six bandits board the steamer, Midnight Sun, tied to the bank of the Mackenzie, hold up Father Claverly and other passengers. Kill Jimmy Montgomery, formerly of the Mounted, and get away with gold dust and furs. Corp. Bill Hardsock reports the crime to Sgt. Alan Baker at the Mounted Police post at Fort Endurance.

He thought: "I can't blame her for not wanting to live here in the North. Her brother died here; she hasn't any friends; these folks don't understand her. If she wants to live in a city, that's as natural, as much her right, as my wanting to live in this North country. She'd like to have pleasures, clothes, and other things we'll have when I take that Victoria job. Wouldn't any girl want them?"

Bill Hardsock came past the alcove window, hatless, excited. Elizabeth saw him, and realized her talk with Alan was broken. But she did not greatly care. She had given him her ultimatum, she had headed off any antagonism; and what she said about Haskell had galled him as nothing else could have done.

She half-whispered, running her fingers through his hair, "You've been here less than an hour, we've had less than ten minutes together, and now—now something else happens and you'll be gone again." She kissed him quickly and turned away.

As Bill Hardsock stamped into the cabin he burst out: "Oh Lord, Alan, Sammy-hell sure popped down river! The Midnight Sun, bringing up a raft of furs from the Ramparts country, and gold dust, too, a whole wad of it from the Peel and Arctic Red Placers. . . . Down there, mouth of the Big Alooska, when she was taking on wood, half a dozen men bounced her in broad daylight, and robbed her there, right this close to us—"

"Robbed her? Wh-aa-t!"

"That's what they did. They came over the side like as if they were ordinary trappers; they got a clean drop on the crowd, and had the run of the boat for better'n half an hour!"

Alan leaped to the all-important question. "They didn't escape, Bill? They didn't get by with a trick like that?"

Scarcely hearing him, Bill kept pouring out his news. "They took more'n three hundred pounds of dust, and sorted out half a dozen packs of the best and lightest furs. Alan, they shot and killed Jimmy Montgomery! He was the only one that drew a gun against 'em, and a rifle bullet got him cold."

Alan's face went pale. The news of the robbery had been dazing enough to him; but now, this crashing shock of Jimmy's death. . . His lips fashioned silently, "They killed Jimmy. . . . A rifle bullet. . . . He was the only one who drew a gun—" But he could not speak; he could only stare at Bill.

"And if Father Claverly hadn't stepped in and helped stop a rush, Alan, they'd have shot up the whole deck. They slung the dust and furs into their canoes, and. . . . Did they get away? What brought me busting up the river? I hope they did—clean, slicker'n a whistle!"

In the pause then, Alan fought to shake off his daze. He had to make the plans, fling out a patrol, get into action. It was all in his hands—the pursuit, the capture, the whole heavy responsibility.

He demanded: "Who were they? Trappers, did you say?"

"Un't know who, Alan. But strangers. Five whites and one 'breed."

"Strangers? Can't be! Not in this country."

"But that's what they were. Nobody on the boat had ever seen a single one of 'em."

Alan did not believe this, but for the moment he passed it up.

"Which way did they go? Have motors on their canoes?"

"No. Paddle craft. They whipped up the Big Alooska."

For a little space Alan stood thinking. Why had those bandits staged their robbery there at the mouth of the Alooska, instead of farther down north, at some lonely reach along the Mackenzie? In an instant he saw the answer to that question. They had chosen with an eye to a quick escape, an escape to the best hiding place in all Mackenzie territory.

As he imagined them whipping up the Big Alooska, whipping up that lonely spruce-buried river past MacMillan's trading post, his thoughts leaped to Joyce, and a fear came into his eyes.

Echoing this very fear, Bill said: "They'll have to pass MacMillan's place, Alan. Ten chances to one, Dave's gone out somewhere after spring peltry and Joyce is there all by herself. . . ."

"But maybe they won't stop," Alan argued. His words were more a prayer for Joyce. "They'll probably try to sneak past. . . ." He broke off: "Bill, go down to barracks, find Ped, tell him to get the launch in shape to travel. While you're doing that, I'll go tell Haskell."

Halfway down the slope Alan came upon Constable Larry Younge, who was spreading Haskell's bed clothing on the grassy terrace to sun.

An older man, past forty, a native of this Waterways country, Larry had spent his boyhood years living with Crees and Chipewyans; and by easy odds he was the best bush detective in the whole division. But in matters of discipline he was worse than Bill Hardsock, for he was older, more set in his ways, more resentful of personal affront. Months ago Haskell had busted him from a corporal; and by humiliating him with orderly duties, he had been trying to make Larry knuckle under. Waiting for another month's pay so he could buy out of the Mounted, Larry was going about his "squaw work" with stoical face, chalking up his personal score against the day when he would be out of service and could settle with Haskell in man-to-man fashion.

Alan bade him: "Larry, drop that. Go and help Bill out. He'll tell you what's up."

It was rare that Inspector Haskell allowed his temper to get the upper hand. He had learned self-control in the hard army school, and he considered that any exhibition of temper was a plebeian thing. But when Alan Baker came into the cabin, Haskell was thoroughly and hotly angered.

A dozen things had happened this morning to irritate him. Constable Whipple, his stool pigeon, a thin clerkish recruit whom he had brought along to Endurance, had repeated several infuriating jokes about him which the men were tossing back and forth in barracks. A few minutes ago Bill Hardsock, plainly carrying important news, had brushed past him as though he had not existed, and had taken the news straight to Alan Baker. And just now through the open door he had seen Baker order Larry Younge to drop work assigned by a superior officer and do something else.

To be so plainly ignored by his own men when any matter of importance came up, made him appear a nobody. To have Baker issuing orders and getting a patrol ready without first consulting him, seemed to him a gross violation of discipline. He had formerly been forced to let Baker have his way in managing the post; but now, shocked at realizing how very little he himself amounted to here, and confident that his six months of experience made him capable of running the detachment himself, he had sworn he was going to come down on these men and come down hard.

But the secret and real source of his anger was a deep smoldering jealousy of Baker because of Elizabeth Spaulding. More clearly at every talk with her, he saw she trusted Baker, liked him, and was going to marry him. Her cool inaccessibility maddened Haskell; and her comparison between him and a ninety-a-month sergeant cut his pride to the quick.

Pretty, cool, a trifle haughty, she was just the kind of girl who suited him, and was the only person here at Endurance whom he cared to associate with. His admiration had mounted, it had quickened with passion, it had become a fire in his blood—the first and only passionate affection he had ever known. His life, formerly so leisurely and purposeless, had taken on an aim, a goal. That goal was to smash her engagement and wrest her away from Baker.

As Alan now hurried into the cabin, Haskell swung on him:

"Don't you know better than to come bursting into an officer's quarters without knocking and asking permission? Go out and try it again."

His words went past Alan unheeded. Alan's mind was too much a turmoil. . . . Jimmy murdered, Joyce alone there on the lonely savage Alooska, those six bandit strangers escaping with their loot. . . . There was but one thought in his mind—to overhaul those two canoes before they were lost beyond all pursuit.

Forgetting even his salute, he came across to the desk. As though checked by the look on his face, Haskell did not repeat the reprimand. Instead he listened silently while Alan reported the robbery, murder, escape.

"They're heading up the Big Alooska toward a muskeg country lying back there in the northeast," Alan explained quickly. "It's called the Thal-Azzah, the Land of Many Waters. It's ten thousand square miles of criss-cross waterways—lakes, channels, slow creeks, and soup-thin bog all covered with flags and willows. They're heading for the Thal-Azzah. That's why they staged the robbery at the Alooska mouth—so they'd have a straight shoot into that muskeg. If they reach it we might never get them. I'm going to take the launch and the five men I've got—"

Haskell stiffened. In sarcastic tones he interrupted: "You've got? Just a second, Baker. It would be a little better form to give your report and possibly make suggestions, and then allow me, as officer commanding here, to issue orders."

Alan stared at him in surprise. After all the long months of the winter past when he had initiated every patrol that went out, he was totally unprepared for this testy reprimand. An anger rose in him at Haskell's choosing to bandy personalities just now when those two canoes were whipping up the Alooska.

Trying to fight down his impatience, he said: "Maybe it was tactless of me. But all along I've been—"

"Yes, certainly—acting as though you were O. C. around here. You didn't appreciate tolerance when you had it. You can take note from now on you haven't got it! I'll issue the orders about this patrol."

Abruptly he turned away to the wall behind him where a map of the Endurance country was tacked up. A big six-foot-square mosaic, it was the inspector's own handiwork—a synthesis of government reports, explorers' sketches and unreliable Indian accounts. Though a few of the larger details were correct, in Alan's eyes it was a clumsy and ridiculous piece of charting.

As he waited, swearing at this loss of precious minutes, Alan happened to see Constable Whipple over in a corner, making inventory entries at a table. He said:

"Whipple, you'd better knock off on that and get into fatigue clothes. We'll need all the men on this patrol."

Whipple did not obey him, or stir, but waited for the inspector's orders. Alan later remembered, to his heavy cost and sorrow, how Whipple had sat there in the corner, listening, scratching away with a pen, while Bill and Larry and Pedneault were down at the wharf hurriedly making ready.

In helpless exasperation at Haskell, he thought: "Good Lord, aren't you ever going to get through studying that crazy d-d map?" Back of this change in Haskell, this angry decision to run Endurance according to his own notions, Alan sensed an ugly hostility against him personally. He was quite well aware of the cause of that bad blood. He had not been blind these last months; he knew Haskell was madly in love with Elizabeth.

Presently, turning around from his map, Haskell said:

"I see that the Big Alooska, about a hundred miles northeast from its mouth, divides into two branches. To hurry this talk up, Alan stepped around behind the desk, and pointed at the map as he spoke.

"Yes, that forks is called Big Leavings. But it's farther east than your map shows; it's nearer two hundred miles. Here's MacMillan's trading post. Here's the Forks. The right branch leads southeast through this. . . . It should be marked timber country. The left branch goes northeast into the big muskeg. About here is where the Thal-Azzah should be marked. They're heading up this left branch for the Thal-Azzah—"

Interrupting, Haskell demanded, "How do you know they're doing that?"

"I don't know, but it's a sensible guess. The Thal-Azzah is a hiding place made to order, and they're surely breaking for it."

Grateful and Beautiful Tribute to Loved Wife

Those who report the inscriptions in old burying grounds do so ordinarily to call attention to what is quaint, unfutured and bizarre. A different quest in these days might have as its object the discovery of inscriptions which testify, with simple sincerity, to long lives of joint happiness. The present-day world benefits by every reminder that there were such and always are.

Perhaps in all New England there is no more graceful tribute to a grateful devotion than that upon a headstone, placed not so many years ago, in the old Grove Street cemetery in New Haven. It was placed there at the grave of his wife by a physician whose high skill and learning were long in the service of the community and of the Yale Medical school, whose courtesy and graciousness became a tradition and who bore worthily a great name, Francis Bacon. Below her name and the fact that she was his wife, he added: "For forty years the crown of his felicity."—Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

With the Passing Years

The United States public health service says that the shrinkage of tissue which accompanies old age is probably the result of several factors, among which may be mentioned inadequate nutrition of cells, diminished internal secretions, such as secretions from the pituitary and adrenal glands. The cells of the tissue probably die off from lack of proper metabolism of all the vital activity of the body in the intake of food, discharge of waste products, etc.

Lesson for November 15

PAUL IN JERUSALEM

GOLDEN TEXT—For thou shalt be his witness unto all men of what thou hast seen and heard.

LESSON TEXT—Acts 21:17-23:22.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Paul in Trouble.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Paul in Trouble.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Paul Faces His Enemies.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Bearing Testimony in the Holy City.

I. Paul's Vow (21:17-26).

Upon Paul's arrival at Jerusalem representatives of the church there gave him a cordial reception. In order that the brethren in Jerusalem might graciously receive him, it was proposed to him by the elders that he take a Jewish vow to prove that he was in no way opposed to the law. They recognized that such an act would in no way compromise or involve the Gentile brethren. Nor did it compromise his own principle of action; namely, to the Jews he became a Jew and to the Gentiles a Gentile, all things to all men in order to gain them for Christ.

II. Paul's Arrest (21:27-40).

How far this act conciliated the Christian Jews we are not told, but it enraged the unbelieving Jews, causing them to resort to mob law. These maddened Jews seized Paul, dragged him from the temple and beat him mercilessly, intending to put him to death. He was rescued from the mob by the Roman guard. In order to protect him from the murderous frenzy of the mob, the soldiers lifted him upon their shoulders and bore him up the stairs. Paul kept himself under control and politely asked permission of the captain to speak to the people. When he addressed him in Greek and mentioned his Roman citizenship, the captain granted his request.

III. Paul's Defense (22:1-27).

Paul's chief concern was not his own safety. He used this last opportunity to witness unto them of Christ.

1. His claim for a rightful hearing (vv. 1-3).

a. His birth (v. 3). He was a Jew, born in Tarsus, a city of no mean reputation.

b. His education (v. 3). He was educated under the tutelage of Gamaliel, and instructed according to the perfect manner of the law of the fathers.

c. His zeal (v. 3). He was as zealous toward God as the Jews who were trying to destroy him.

2. His former attitude toward Jesus (vv. 4, 5). "I persecuted this way unto the death."

3. How his attitude was changed (vv. 6-16). This change of attitude was brought about by the intervention of the Lord. While on his way to Damascus with authority to bind the Christians at Jerusalem, he was smitten to the ground by a light from heaven, and the voice of the Lord said, "Why persecutest thou me?" When Paul inquired as to what he was to do, he was told to go into Damascus where he would receive instructions. Ananias was sent to him by the Lord for this purpose.

4. The Lord commissioned him to go to the Gentiles (vv. 17-21). It was not of his own will that he preached to the Gentiles but by the Lord's direct commission.

IV. Paul before the Sanhedrin (23:1-10).

The Roman officer in order to learn why Paul was arrested, commanded the chief council to assemble and brought Paul before them. This shows that there was an effort made by the Romans to give justice to Paul.

1. Paul's earnest look at the council (vv. 1, 2). This was a solicitation of their honor to give him a fair hearing, and also a look of conscious integrity and unflinching courage.

2. Paul's stern rebuke of the head of the council. "God shall smite thee, thou whitened wall." Paul shows that he had the highest respect for the office, but the man now occupying it was not worthy of it.

3. Paul's appeal to the Pharisees (vv. 6-10). Seeing that he could not get a fair hearing, and perceiving that the body before him was made up of Pharisees and Sadducees, he appealed to the Pharisees, for his preaching had something in common with their belief.

V. The Lord Stood by Paul (v. 11). He was in great need of grace. He may have begun to question the wisdom of his going to Jerusalem, but the Lord assured him that his course was right.

VI. The Conspiracy to Kill Paul (vv. 18-22).

More than forty men banded together for the purpose of getting Paul out of the way.

The Divine Presence

Of the reality of fellowship with God every religious man is assured. Religion implies such a fellowship of love and grace on the part of God. How such a consciousness brings strength and comfort to a human heart let every one who knows the power of salvation attest.

Chain of Blessing

Promise—prayer—performance are three links in the chain of blessing. If the middle link is missing, we have no right to expect the third.

Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil builds and protects the bodies of growing youngsters, infants, and expectant mothers. Doctors find it gives them a wealth of Vitamin A for correct growth, as well as Vitamin D, the "sunshine vitamin" so essential in building strong, healthy bones and teeth. Valuable calcium salts are also in it. . . . and its pleasant flavor makes Scott's Emulsion easy for children to take. Good for adults too! Scott & Bowne, Bloomfield, N. J. Sales Representatives, H. AUTO WINS ITS WAY IN EASTERN LANDS

The automobile has recently made two more conquests in out-of-the-way parts of the world. Our State department has just recognized the government of Ibn Saud, king of Hejaz and sultan of Nejd and divers other tracts of the Arabian desert. Ibn controls the sacred place of Mecca, and it seems that Moslem pilgrims who formerly journey thither by caravan now prefer to travel by auto bus, much to the scandal of the holy men and the discomfiture of the camel drivers. In diplomatic circles it is calculated that our recognition of the picturesque Arab potentate will stimulate the sale of American automobiles in the land of the prophet.

Meanwhile the dalai lama, head of the monastic hierarchy that rules Tibet, has ordered a "devil wagon" from India for his private and royal use, all of which is in defiance of the 15,000-odd monks who constitute the governing caste of the country. The story goes that the grand lama previously owned another car, but the other priests objected so vigorously to it that he soon locked it up in a mule stall in the monastery, where it succumbed to the ravages of rust.

The magnitude of such an innovation may be understood when one realizes that the machine age in Tibet has largely been limited to the prayer wheels in which the 15,000 odd monks grind out their incantations.

Atoms Take Journeys

Atoms, even the heavy atoms of lead, are wanderers. Prof. J. G. von Hevesy of the University of Freiburg in Breisgau, Germany, has been investigating their properties. Lead atoms are constantly in motion, even in solid metal, he believes. In an alloy of lead and gold, at a temperature half again as high as that of boiling water, the atoms wander through a space of a hundredth of a cubic inch in a day. When there is nothing but lead in the lump, however, moving about is not nearly so easy; in pure lead an atom can migrate in one day through a space of one to two ten-billionths of a cubic inch.

A Joke Returns

The old joke about used razor blades has been exhumed again, this time by the publicity engineer for a new hotel in New York. The hotel, one learns, has been built with special cavities for the emeritus blades.

A guest need only drop his blade in a slot in the bathroom, and it will sink to eternal rest somewhere in the fabric of the building. A man can stop at that hotel, and shave, and experience all the for-posterity sensations of a cornerstone layer.—Spokane Spokesman-Review.

Wild Life Just Outside

Gay Capital of Italy

Although Rome has been a center of civilization for 2,500 years, it still lies just a few hours' train ride from one of the most rugged and wildest districts on earth, the province of Abruzzi.

Bears and wolves are still to be found wandering through the forests of this mountainous section, and shepherds are accustomed to encounters with them. Now it has been decided to stock the national park of Abruzzi with some of these animals before, if ever, they become completely extinct. Within a few weeks the director has had presented to him a chamois, which was rescued from a river into which it had jumped to escape from a wolf, and a baby bear, which was found wandering helplessly about after its mother had made a wild attack on a flock of sheep.

Shepherds are joining enthusiastically in the work of collecting fauna, and now, instead of shooting every wild animal, they hastily call the director of the park for help in capturing it.

Clockmakers Celebrate

British clockmakers celebrated the three hundredth anniversary of Charles II's grant of their charter of incorporation as "Master, Wardens and Fellowship of the Art of Mystery of Clockmaking of the City of London."

Familiar

On the arrival of two relatives whom Mary Jane had not seen for some time, her mother inquired: "Don't you know these visitors, Mary Jane?"

The child studied them and, observing that one was extremely tall while the other was short, she replied: "Is it Mutt and Jeff?"

To Classify Blood Stains

Classification of blood stains is being made by a German expert as an aid in crime detection. He believes that eventually the stains on the clothing of a suspect may be classified so that it quickly will be matched with that of the victim. While courts have recognized blood stains were made by human blood or not, there has been no test which will accurately determine the blood group of stains which have thoroughly dried. The expert believes he will supply this deficiency.

In Good Condition

At the opening of school there was a great deal of buying and selling of used textbooks. Many advertisements appeared on blackboards setting forth the attractive features of respective books. The usual inducement to purchasers was a low price, but one pupil advertised as follows: "For sale: English Book I. Good Shape. Never Used."—Exchange.

Dividend Printing

There is one kind of printing that you want—printing that pays a dividend on the investment.

A letterhead with right sort of type properly balanced is a real business asset. It wins the approval of the person receiving your letter, and while he is in this frame of mind your letter is read.

The same reasoning applies to any other job of printing. Neatness, the right weight and kind of paper, the color of the ink, the selection of the type, all play an important part in the production of dividend printing.

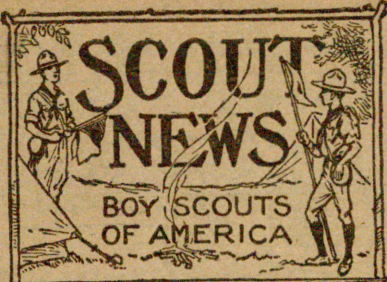

We are equipped to give you that kind of printing. Let us prove it to you.

No special place has been announced.

A special Armistice service was conducted at the St. John Evangelical church in Mokena Sunday morning. There were a number of solos and special hymns. Rev. Mr. Lapp preached on "The Building of Peace". The articles of the treaty renouncing war was read. The people pledged in unison their allegiance to their country in its pursuit of peace. The antiphony "It shall not be again" was sung by Mrs. V. Bibicoff and Leon Tonn.

Postmistress Daisy Lynk attended a meeting of Will County post masters held at the Woodruff Inn at Joliet Tuesday. On Wednesday she attended a special Armistice day affair at the Marshall Field store in Chicago.

George Lauffer

Forefeits Visitation

Rights In Court

The George Lauffer and Steele case in Mokena which has been holding attention all summer, came up in the Will County Circuit court last Friday before Judge Frederick Hill. Mrs. Steele who was divorced from Lauffer a few years ago had witnesses in court proving that Lauffer took his youngest daughter Adelaide with him against her will to his home in Grant Park in violation of a court order which had given him the privilege of seeing his children each Sunday afternoon between the hours of 2 and 4.

Two deputies had to be on guard each Sunday to prevent Lauffer from disturbing the peace at the Steele home. After hearing the evidence Judge Hill canceled Lauffer's visitation permit and warned him to keep away from the Steele home. If he violates this order he is in contempt of court and will then be subject to a jail sentence.

In the hearing Friday Lauffer was represented by Attorney Haney of Kankakee.

NIAGARI GIRLS ELECT OFFICERS FOR NEXT YEAR

The Niagara Girls Club have elected the following officers for the ensuing year:

President, Dorothy Robinson

Secretary, Genevieve Oulman

Treasurer, Lois Klepper

On Tuesday evening the club enjoyed a social gathering at the home of Dorothy and Mereta Robinson.

Mrs. Buccannon, the mother of the young ladies named, planned and executed a very clever program of entertainment so there was not a dull moment. She turned the living room into a typical school room replete even with a tall stool and a dunce cap. Games were played. In a zoology game Miss Shirley Anderson was the prize winner. In a guessing contest Miss Leona Simon was the winner. Delightful refreshments were served. All had a fine time and the girls wish to express their appreciation to Mrs. Buccannon for the good time enjoyed.

The club is selling candy, the proceeds to go to the local relief fund.

Mrs. Frank Hoar underwent an operation at the St. Bernard hospital in Chicago last week. She is getting along as well as can be expected. Her many friends wish for her speedy recovery.

Mrs. Trudie Swisher and son visited with the former's sister, Mrs. C. J. Davis in Downers Grove Tuesday and also visited with friends in Aurora.

St. John's

Outweighs Culver

St. John's Military Academy of Delafield, Wis., will outweigh Culver Military Academy of Culver, Ind., thirteen pounds to the man in their second annual service football at Soldier Field in Chicago on Saturday afternoon, November 14.

The Wisconsin eleven averages slightly under 180 pounds while Culver's average is approximately 167. St. John's line averages 186 and its backfield 168. The figures for Culver are 179 for the line and 145 for the backfield.

As the figures show Culver is outclassed in poundage both in the forward line and behind it. For that reason, Coach Bob Peck has turned to the air and the open field and virtually all of his thrusts will be in those directions.

St. John's on the other hand, will take every advantage of its superior weight and will attempt to wear out Culver in the first half and fold up the foe in the second. The defeat of Culver has been the aim of the Delafield eleven all season. Last year Culver sprang a surprise by beating one of the finest teams ever produced by St. John's, and the Wisconsin academy never will be content until it has avenged the defeat.

The parade of the cadet battalions thru downtown Chicago will start at 12:15 p. m. At 1:15 o'clock the review of the uniformed masses will be held. The game will start at two o'clock. There will be another review between halves. Two squadrons of planes from St. John's flying school will soar overhead and will release hundreds of tiny parachutes carrying national and school colors.

Profits will be used for the relief of the unemployed and former service men in distress. The American Legion and the Joint Emergency Relief Fund of Cook County are sponsoring the event.

CHICAGO MOTOR CLUB RADIO FEATURE

The Chicago Motor Club players at 9 next Wednesday night (Nov. 18) will offer on WENR a romantic drama in which Washington and Lafayette are the principal characters, and Valley Forge and Paris during the French Revolution the main settings.

NEWS NOTES

SERVICE SUNDAY

It is hoped that all members and friends will attend the morning worship service Sunday. It is very easy to neglect the worship of God and our religious duties until some crisis comes into our lives and then fall back upon the church and God for help. It is much better to keep in daily touch with Him and especially thru the worship service on Sunday. Parents of children can little afford not to set the right example in this way.

LADIES GUILD MEETING

Because the regular meeting of the Ladies Guild would fall on Thanksgiving this month, the meeting will be held Thursday, Nov. 19.

JUNIOR CHOIR

The Junior Choir sang two anthems Sunday and were very well received. There are about 25 members of the choir now and they are doing very nicely. The choir is open for all children who are in the 6th, 7th or 8th grades in school. It is hoped that the parents will co-operate in this if they have children in these grades and see that they attend the choir practice which is held every Saturday afternoon at 1:30 p. m. at the church.

The choir will have a special outing every month. Last month they had a party at the Community Center Cabin. This month it is planned that they shall take a trip to certain places of interest in Chicago.

These memberships make possible a program which includes:

Life-Saving—70,000 candidates pass tests in year—one way to prevent the 7,000 drownings now occurring each year.
